Description
The course type management system has created a bunch of issues in the weblcms. For example when you want to create a new course with no course settings attached the system won't let you create that course. We should think about how we can improve the course type management system

History

#1 - 09/02/2011 11:39 - Laurent Opprecht

One possible solution would be to take a cloning/templating approach:

- add a boolean field called "Template" to a course
- add a field called "Parent" to a course
- reuse the standard tools to create a template course - with no parent.
- on creation of a new course clone the parent - including objects like intro, etc on the other hand that would be a significant departure from the current solution. Not sure it would be worth it.
