Description
When creating a new course, if the generated code is too long, Chamilo answers the code "Already exists", while it should just say it is too long

I think the generated code is never going to be big because it's auto generated by chamilo.
I created a course with a big title and no messages were shown. Fixed?

I think you have to have several courses with the same title (and the same expected long code) and then it happens. Must try it myself, I have only been reported this.

Tried with TESTLONGCODEFORCHAMILO4548 as a code added manually to the "code" box.

The error message (in French): "Le cours n'a pas été créé à cause d'une erreur interne."

The message should be something like "The course code you want to use for this new course is already used. Please choose another code."

I tried here

/main/create_course/add_course.php

main/create_course/add_course.php

and I didn't find the error.

Then I tried to create again a course with this name and code: TESTLONGCODEFORCHAMILO4548 and then I can see the error ... i will check that ...

There's still one literal "40" appearing in main/create_course/add_course.php with your change. I think you should use the constant. Is there anything against it?

#8 - 20/05/2012 00:31 - Yannick Warnier

The rest is great, as usual :-)
