Description

When one filters or searches in repository, and then returns to normal objects view, then the structure on the left hand side of the page shows the category structure, with the root underlined (active). The view of the objects on the right hand side does not follow. It still shows the result of the previous (fautly) filtering action.

It requires another click in the category structure to render a page showing the correct content of of the marked (underlined) (root) category.

This leads to confusion and possibly panic (where have all my objects gone?)
